

Agricultural policy

Agricultural policy of a country is mostly designed by the Government for raising agricultural production and productivity and also for raising the level of income and standard of living of farmers within a definite time frame. This policy is formulated for all round and comprehensive development of the agricultural sector. In India, the main objectives of agricultural policy are to remove the major problems of agricultural sector related to improper and inefficient uses of natural resources, predominance of low-value agriculture, poor cost-benefit ratio of the sectoral activities and insignificant progress of co-operative farming and other self-help institutions. The following are some of the important objectives of India's agricultural policy:

- | | |
|---|---|
| (i) Raising the Productivity of Inputs | (iv) Modernizing Agricultural Sector |
| (ii) Raising Value-Added per Hectare | (v) Checking Environmental Degradation |
| (iii) Protecting the Interest of Poor Farmers | (vi) Agricultural Research and Training |
| | (vii) Removing Bureaucratic Obstacles |

National Agriculture Policy, 2000

The first ever National Agriculture Policy was announced on 28th July, 2000. The formulation of Agriculture Policy had been under consideration of the Government for the last few years as comprehensive National Agriculture Policy was absolutely essential to build on the inherent strength of the agriculture and allied sectors to address the constraints and to make optimal use of resources and opportunities emerging as a result of advancement in science and technology and emerging of a new economic regime.

National Agriculture Policy seeks to actualise vast untapped growth potential of Indian Agriculture, strengthen rural infrastructure to support faster agricultural development, promote value addition, accelerate the growth of agro-business create employment in rural areas, secure affair standard of living for the farmers and agricultural workers and their families, discourage migration to urban areas and face the challenges arising out of economic liberalization and globalization over the next two decades, it aims to attain:

- A growth rate in excess of four per cent annum in the agriculture sector;
- Growth that is based on efficient use of resources and conserves our soil, water and bio-diversity;
- Growth with equality, i.e. growth which is widespread across regions and famers;
- Growth that is demand driven and caters to domestic markets and maximizes benefits from exports of agricultural products in the face of the challenges arising from economic liberalization and globalisation
- Growth that is sustainable technologically, environmentally and economically.

Informing policy with agricultural R&D evidence: An ASTI pilot project in Ethiopia, Nigeria, and Tanzania Carden, Fred, Beintema, Nienke M., Admassie, Assefa, Katera, Lucas, Mboghoina, Thadeus, Onyekwena, Chukwuka, Despite Agricultural Science and Technology Indicators ASTI global and regional visibility and the use of its data for institutional decision making by various national agricultural research institutes the incorporation of ASTI evidence into national policymaking remains mostly ad hoc and is often indirect Moreover interventions to influence the uptake of ASTI data for this purpose have been limited Given agricultural research s important role in increasing agricultural productivity economic growth and poverty reduction ASTI initiated a pilot study in three African countries Ethiopia Nigeria and Tanzania to develop a clearer understanding of how to promote the uptake of agricultural research evidence The study focused on how evidence in general and ASTI evidence in particular could be more effectively integrated at the national level particularly to promote the allocation of sustainable resources to agricultural research The study was conducted in two stages 1 the mapping of each country s agricultural research interests and issues and 2 identifying initial activities through which those interests offered opportunities both to fill research gaps and enhance the utility of agricultural research Findings from the pilot studies point to opportunities for improving the availability accessibility appropriateness and ownership of ASTI evidence to ensure that it contributes more effectively as a valuable resource for decision making Strong relationships and networks are needed to increase awareness of ASTI evidence and to institute linkages with official national data systems Outcomes indicated both interest in the evidence and recognition of its merit Greater outreach and connectivity with local institutions may be useful next steps These findings lead to some general recommendations for improving the use of evidence along with specific recommendations for the ASTI network approach moving forward Shifting ownership of the data and systems to the regional and national levels a key objective of the network approach is a long term undertaking A transition period is needed accompanied by a strategic plan to shift responsibility and action first to the regional level and then to the national level where feasible

Managing the ability of agriculture to meet rising global demand and to respond to the changes and opportunities will require good policy sustained investments and innovation not business as usual Investments in public Research and Development extension education and their links with one another have elicited high returns and pro poor growth but these investments alone will not elicit innovation at the pace or on the scale required by the intensifying and proliferating challenges confronting agriculture Experience indicates that aside from a strong capacity in Research and Development the ability to innovate is often related to collective action coordination the exchange of knowledge among diverse actors the incentives and resources available to form partnerships and develop businesses and conditions that make it possible for farmers or entrepreneurs to use the innovations While consensus is developing about what is meant by innovation and innovation system no detailed blueprint exists for making agricultural innovation happen at a given time in a given place for a given result The AIS approach that looks at these multiple conditions and relationships that promote innovation in agriculture has however moved from a concept to a sub discipline with principles of analysis and action AIS investments must be specific to the context responding to the stage of development in a particular country and agricultural sector especially the AIS This sourcebook contributes to identifying designing and implementing the investments approaches and complementary interventions that appear most likely to strengthen AIS and to promote agricultural innovation and equitable growth It emphasizes the lessons learned benefits and impacts implementation issues and prospects for replicating or expanding successful practices The information in this sourcebook derives from approaches that have been tested at different scales in different contexts It reflects the experiences and evolving understanding of numerous individuals and organizations concerned with agricultural innovation including the World Bank This information is targeted to the key operational staff in international and regional development agencies and national governments who design and implement lending projects and to the practitioners who design thematic programs and technical assistance packages The sourcebook can also be an important resource for the research community and nongovernmental organizations NGOs Agricultural Research Policy Committee, Functions and Goals Agricultural Research Policy Committee, 1949
