The Red Window Fergus Hume, 2013-01-01

Hullo Gore The young soldier stopped started colored with annoyance and with a surprised expression turned to look on the other soldier who had addressed him After a moment s scrutiny of the stranger s genial smile he extended his hand with pleased recognition Conniston said he I thought you were in America So I am so don t call me Conniston at the pitch of your voice old boy His lordship of that name is camping on Californian slopes for a big game shoot The warrior who stands before you is Dick West of the Lancers the old Come to the Fronts And what are you doing as an Imperial Yeoman Gore Not that name said the other with an anxious glance around Like yourself I don t want to be known Oh So you are sailing under false colors also Against my will Conniston I mean West I am Corporal Bernard Hum said Lord Conniston with an approving nod You have kept your Christian name I see It is all that remains of my old life replied Gore bitterly But your title Conniston Has disappeared said the lancer good humoredly until I can make enough money to gild it Do you hope to do that on a private s pay West shrugged his shoulders I hope to fight my way during the war to a general s rank With that and a V C an old castle and an older title I may catch a dollar heiress by the time the Boers give in You don t put in your good looks Conniston said Bernard smiling Dollar heiresses don t buy what s in the shop windows old man But won t you explain your uniform and dismal looks Gore laughed My dismal looks have passed away since we have met so opportunely he said looking across the grass Come and sit down We have much to say to one another Conniston and Gore they used the old names in preference to the new walked across the grass to an isolated seat under a leafless elm The two old friends had met near the magazine in Hyde Park on the borders of the Serpentine and the meeting was as unexpected as pleasant It was a gray damp October day and the trees were raining yellow brown and red leaves on the sodden ground Yet a breath of summer lingered in the atmosphere and there was a warmth in the air which had lured many people to the Park Winter was coming fast and the place untidy with withered leaves bare of flowers and dismal under a sombre windy sky looked unattractive enough But the two did not mind the dreary day Summer the summer of youth was in their hearts and recalling their old school friendship they smiled on one another as they sat down In the distance a few children were playing their nursemaids comparing notes or chatting with friends or stray policemen so there was no one near to overhear what they had to say A number of fashionable carriages rolled along the road and occasionally someone they knew would pass But vehicles and people belonged to the old world out of which they had stepped into the new and they sat like a couple of Peris at the gate of Paradise but less discontented Both the young men were handsome in their several ways The yeoman was tall slender dark and markedly quiet in his manner His clear cut face was clean shaven he had black hair dark blue eyes put in as the Irish say with a dirty finger and his figure was admirably proportioned In his khaki he looked a fine specimen of a man in his twenty fifth year But his expression was stern even bitter and there were thoughtful furrows on his forehead which should not have been there at his age Conniston noted these and concluded silently that the world had gone awry with his formerly sunny faced friend At Eton Gore had always been happy and good tempered Conniston himself formed a contrast to his companion He was not tall but slightly built and wiry alert in his manner and quick in his movements As fair as Gore was dark he wore a small light mustache which he pulled restlessly when excited In his smart tight fitting uniform he looked a natty jimp soldier and his reduced position did not seem to affect his spirits He smiled and joked and laughed and bubbled over with delight on seeing his school chum again Gore was also delighted but being quieter did not reveal his pleasure so openly When they were seated the lancer produced an ornate silver case far too extravagant for a private and offered Gore a particularly excellent cigarette I have a confiding tobacconist said Conniston who supplies me with the best in the hope that I ll pay him some day I can stand a lot but bad tobacco is beyond my powers of endurance I m a self indulgent beast Gore Gore lighted up How did your tobacconist know you he asked Because a newly grown mustache wasn t a sufficient disguise I walked into the shop one day hoping he was out But he chanced to be in and immediately knew me I made him promise to hold his tongue and said I had volunteered for the war He s a good chap and never told a soul Oh my aunt chattered Conniston What would my noble relatives say if they saw me in this kit You are supposed to be in California That s so shootin But I m quartered at Canterbury and only come up to town every now and again Of course I take care to keep out of the fashionable world so no one s spotted me yet Your officers There s no one in the regiment I know The Tommies take me for a gentleman who has gone wrong and I keep to their society Not that a private has much to do with the officers They take little notice of me and I ve learned to say Sir quite nicely grinned Conniston
