particularly in terms of their representation of economic and environmental concerns. It argues that across Appalachian fiction the plight of characters to save their homes, land, and way of life from the destructive forces of extractive industries brings sharply to bare the histories of colonization and slavery that problematize questions of belonging, ownership, and possession. Robertson extensively considers contemporary manifestations of the gothic in Appalachian literature, arguing that gothic tropes abound in fiction that focuses on the impacts of extractive industries that connect this micro region with other parts of the Global North and Global South where the devastating impacts of extractive industries are also experienced socially, economically, and environmentally.
