Silent Poetry Essays In Numerological Analysis:

Silent Poetry Alastair Fowler, 1970 A study of numerology in Elizabethan poetry with some background studies which base the subject in classical learning the works of Dante and Petrarch and the esoteric traditions of the humanists The central assumption of numerological criticism is that there exist works written in this tradition which show a correspondence between structure and meaning on a numerical plane that is one in which the number of the constituent parts lines stanzas sonnets in a sequence expresses a major aspect of the meaning For instance parts of the whole can be arranged to represent months of the year and so on Such structures of time and the triumphal form in which the most important sovereign element is placed at the centre are the two main numerological patterns discussed by Dr Fowler Critics have tended to regard numerology as an isolated phenomenon rare after the Middle Ages but Dr Fowler demonstrates its persistence in the works of Spenser Sidney Chapman Shakespeare Donne Jonson Dryden and others Silent Poetry Alastair Fowler, 1970

Essays in the Numerical Criticism of Medieval Literature Caroline D. Eckhardt, 1979 The essays in this collection are attempts to understand medieval aesthetic principles and products not to champion the numerical approach All the essays share a confidence that when Chaucer for example wrote alle thynges been ordeyned and nombred he was enunciating a philosophical and aesthetic principle of fundamental importance to medieval thought John Dryden David J.
