Sound Streams Andrew J Bottomley, 2020-06-01 In talking about contemporary media we often use a language of newness applying words like revolution and disruption Yet the emergence of new sound media technologies and content from the earliest internet radio broadcasts to the development of algorithmic music services and the origins of podcasting are not a disruption but a continuation of the century long history of radio Today s most innovative media makers are reintroducing forms of audio storytelling from radio s past Sound Streams is the first book to historicize radio internet convergence from the early 90s through the present demonstrating how so called new media represent an evolutionary shift that is nevertheless historically consistent with earlier modes of broadcasting Various iterations of internet radio from streaming audio to podcasting are all new radio practices rather than each being a separate new medium radio is any sound media that is purposefully crafted to be heard by an audience Rather than a particular set of technologies or textual conventions web based broadcasting combines unique practices and features and ideas from radio history In addition there exists a distinctive conversationality and reflexivity to radio talk including a propensity for personal stories and emotional disclosure that suits networked digital media culture What media convergence has done is extend and intensify radio s logics of connectivity and sharing sonically mediated personal expression intended for public consideration abounds in online media networks Sound Streams marks a significant contribution to digital media and internet studies Its mix of cultural history industry research and genre and formal analysis especially of contemporary audio storytelling will appeal to media scholars radio and podcast practitioners audio journalism students and dedicated podcast fans

Recording Russia Gabriella Safran, 2022-11-15 Recording Russia examines scenes of listening to the people across a variety of texts by Russian writers and European travelers to Russia Gabriella Safran challenges readings of these works that essentialize Russia as a singular place where communication between the classes is consistently fraught arguing instead that as in the West the sense of separation or connection between intellectuals and those they interviewed or observed is as much about technology and performance as politics and emotions Nineteenth century writers belonged to a distinctive media generation using new communication technologies not bells but mechanically produced paper cataloguing systems telegraphy and stenography Russian writers and European observers of Russia in this era described themselves and their characters as trying hard to listen to and record the laboring and emerging middle classes They depicted scenes of listening as contests where one listener bests another at times the contest is between two sides of the same person They sometimes described Russia as an ideal testing ground for listening because of its extreme cold and silence As the mid century generation witnessed the social changes of the 1860s and 1870s their listening scenes revealed increasing skepticism about the idea that anyone could accurately identify or record the unadulterated voice of the people Bringing together intellectual history and literary analysis and drawing on ideas from linguistic anthropology and sound and media studies Recording Russia looks at how writers folklorists and linguists such as Turgenev Dostoevsky and Vladimir Dahl as well as foreign visitors thought about the possibilities and meanings of listening to and repeating other people s words
