weary of decades of entrenched partisan feuding are increasingly distancing themselves from politics. Some however continue to turn toward the state and public policy to find solutions to the world's problems. The problem is that both responses allow a narrow vision of politics to determine the church's mission and ministries which often ends up separating its commitment to personal faith from the pursuit of social justice, the King from the kingdom. Christians too easily forget that the church is inherently political, a community defined by its allegiance to a King, its citizenship in a new world and its call to work alongside others in pursuit of a new way of life. The church needs a political vision that is more than blind acceptance or mere rejection of past models. It needs a positive vision that takes its cues about politics not from the nation-state but from another political reality, the kingdom of God. This book tells the stories of the visits of two researchers to five diverse congregations across the United States. From the megachurch energy of Rick Warren's Saddleback Church in California to a young Emergent community in Minneapolis to the politically active home of Martin Luther King in Atlanta, these stories illuminate the vastly different ways congregations understand and approach politics and offer a glimpse of a new political imagination for today's church.

Bonhoeffer Clifford J. Green, 1999 Rev. ed. of The Sociality of Christ and Humanity The Christian Century, 1925 Homiletic Review, 1912 Preacher and Homiletic Monthly, 1912 The Homiletic Review, 1912 Metropolitan Pulpit and Homiletic Monthly, 1912 The Watchman-Examiner, 1924 The Responsibility to Protect Semegnish Asfaw, 2005. The controversy on the subject of the responsibility to protect ranges from believers in the use of military force as a last resort in situations where it can stop large-scale human rights violations to those who completely oppose military interventions. Participants to a seminar organized in 2005 by the Commission of Churches on International Affairs look at humanitarian intervention from theological, ethical, and political perspectives. Participants divided themselves into four working groups that worked in four sessions that dealt with the responsibility to prevent conflict and human rights violations on what are the alternatives when national authorities fail their citizens, what are the criteria for intervention and what happens when international authorities fail to protect human rights violations as it happened with Palestinian refugees and what is the international legal framework in dealing with international failure.
