Marching To Different Drummers Evolution Of The Armys Environmental Program:

Marching to Different Drummers David Rubenson, 1994 This report discusses the evolution of the U S Army s environmental protection program It is written in briefing form to allow senior Army leaders to grasp quickly the essential points while allowing readers with more detailed interest to glean additional background and information Marching to Different Drummers. Evolution of the Army's Environmental Program ,1996 Recent years have seen dramatic changes in the legal and political obligations of federal facilities to obey local state and federal environmental laws Immunity from regulation is vanishing and federal agencies already dedicate significant resources to correct problems that have arisen from past activities and to ensure that existing operations are in compliance with environmental law Since 1986 when federal facilities were placed on the National Priorities List NPL of the nation s worst hazardous waste sites the Army has made dramatic progress in improving its environmental performance It has moved forward from a near crisis situation in which obligations were ignored or neglected and environmental funds were diverted to other uses to a time when critical environmental obligations are addressed and priority projects are funded This progress brings the Army a new environmental challenge Environmental performance has improved but the costs of environmental protection have been steadily rising in the face of a declining Army budget As with any program that has grown rapidly efficiency must eventually become a central concern The measurement of efficiency however is complicated by scientific and technical uncertainty and the way in which environmental requirements are formulated Because requirements are established by outside regulatory forces it is extremely difficult to know if growing costs are a sign of inefficiency or of growing and more complex requirements Costs may be rising even as the Army improves the effectiveness and efficiency of its program We also note that the Department of Defense DoD policy is changing Both military and political leaders see an increased desire to take a leadership role in environmental policy For DoD to do this there must be a more efficient response to local and regional mandates

For almost four decades controversy has surrounded the tactical use of herbicides in Southeast Asia by the United States military. Few environmental or occupational health issues have received the sustained international attention that has been focused on Agent Orange, the major tactical herbicide deployed in Southern Vietnam. With the opening and establishment of normal relations between the United States and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam in 1995, the time has come for a thorough re-examination of the military use of Agent Orange and other tactical herbicides in Southern Vietnam and the subsequent actions that have been taking place since their use in Vietnam. The United States Department of Defense has had the major role in all military operations involving the use of tactical herbicides, including that of Agent Orange. This included the Department's purchase, shipment, and tactical use of herbicides in Vietnam; its role in the disposition of Agent Orange after Vietnam; its role in conducting long-term epidemiological investigations of the men of Operation Ranch Hand; and its sponsorship of ecological and environmental fate studies. This book was commissioned by The Office of the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense, Installations and Environment, with the intent of providing documentation of the knowledge on the history, use, disposition, and environmental fate of Agent Orange and its associated dioxin.
