Family Life and School Achievement Reginald M. Clark, 2015-07-31 Working mothers broken homes poverty racial or ethnic background poorly educated parents these are the usual reasons given for the academic problems of poor urban children Reginald M Clark contends however that such structural characteristics of families neither predict nor explain the wide variation in academic achievement among children He emphasizes instead the total family life stating that the most important indicators of academic potential are embedded in family culture To support his contentions Clark offers ten intimate portraits of Black families in Chicago Visiting the homes of poor one and two parent families of high and low achievers Clark made detailed observations on the quality of home life noting how family habits and interactions affect school success and what characteristics of family life provide children with school survival skills a complex of behaviors attitudes and knowledge that are the essential elements in academic success Clark's conclusions lead to exciting implications for educational policy If school achievement is not dependent on family structure or income parents can learn to inculcate school survival skills in their children Clark offers specific suggestions and strategies for use by teachers parents school administrators and social service policy makers but his work will also find an audience in urban anthropology family studies and Black studies
