A Land on Fire James Fahn,2008-03-31 The future of Earth s environment will be decided in Asia home to 60 percent of the world s population and some of the world s fastest growing economies As an award winning investigative journalist based in Bangkok James Fahn spent a decade grappling with the challenges facing the region s mega cities tropical forests coastlines and societies dashing toward modernity In A Land on Fire he shares his findings the profound implications for global issues such as climate change the loss of biodiversity and the greening of world trade He explores Southeast Asia's environmental battles through the eyes of the people fighting them and recounts his many adventures while covering them. Whether chasing down log smugglers along the Thai-Burmese border exposing the dumping of toxic mercury into the Gulf of Thailand by multinational oil corporations or covering the controversy surrounding the filming of the movie The Beach, Fahn provides unique insight into the relationship between sustainable development and democracy, the crippling impact of corruption, and the environmental challenges facing us all.

Dams and Development in China Bryan Tilt, 2014-12-02 China is home to half of the world's large dams and adds dozens more each year. The benefits are considerable: dams deliver hydropower, provide reliable irrigation water, protect people and farmland against flooding, and produce hydroelectricity in a nation with a seemingly insatiable appetite for energy. As hydropower responds to a larger share of energy demand, dams may also help to reduce the consumption of fossil fuels, welcome news in a country where air and water pollution have become dire and greenhouse gas emissions are the highest in the world. Yet the advantages of dams come at a high cost for river ecosystems and for the social and economic well-being of local people who face displacement and farmland loss. This book examines the array of water management decisions faced by Chinese leaders and their consequences for local communities. Focusing on the southwestern province of Yunnan, a major hub for hydropower development in China which encompasses one of the world's most biodiverse temperate ecosystems and one of China's most ethnically and culturally rich regions, Bryan Tilt takes the reader from the halls of decision-making power in Beijing to Yunnan's rural villages. In the process, he examines the contrasting values of government agencies, hydropower corporations, NGOs, and local communities and explores how these values are linked to longstanding cultural norms about what is right, proper, and just. He also considers the various strategies these groups use to influence water resource policy, including advocacy, petitioning, and public protest. Drawing on a decade of research, he offers his insights on whether the world's most populous nation will adopt greater transparency, increased scientific collaboration, and broader public participation as it continues to grow economically.

Sub-regionalism and International River Basins Soavapa Ngampramuan, Christian Ploberger, 2020-06-17 This book investigates the origins and dynamics of sub-regional phenomena based on international river basins, namely the Mekong and Danube rivers. It emphasizes the integration process of the Greater Mekong Sub-region and the European Strategy for the Danube Region, which are located in two different geopolitical and structural settings: one in Southeast Asia in the regional context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and the other in Central and Eastern Europe within the regional context of the EU. By comparing two unique case studies within different structural settings, additional and valuable insights into the occurrence and formation of sub-regional integration processes are provided, enabling an evaluation of similarities and differences. Understanding sub-regional integration dynamics requires not only looking upward to the regional and even the global level but indeed looking downwards to the local level. After all, sub-regional integration processes are generally described as bottom-up processes based on local interests and expectations.

Despite the growing number of sub regional projects sub regionalism remains inadequately studied in the field of political science and as such this book offers unique contributions to the understanding of sub regional integration processes. Consequently it will be of interest to readers who are interested in regional and sub regional integration processes as well as those with a specific interest in both the EU and ASEAN geographic regions.

Water Resources Planning and Management
R. Quentin Grafton, Karen Hussey, 2011-02-17 Water is an increasingly critical issue at the forefront of global policy change management and planning. There are growing concerns about water as a renewable resource, its availability for a wide range of users, aquatic ecosystem health and global issues relating to climate change, water security, water trading and water ethics. This handbook provides the most comprehensive reference ever published on water resource issues. It brings together multiple disciplines to understand and help resolve problems of water quality and scarcity from a global perspective. Its case studies and foundation chapters will be greatly valued by students, researchers and professionals involved in water resources, hydrology, governance and public policy, law, economics, geography and environmental studies.

Inadvertent Expansion
Nicholas D. Anderson, 2025-01-15 In Inadvertent Expansion Nicholas D. Anderson investigates a surprisingly common yet overlooked phenomenon in the history of great power politics: territorial expansion that was neither intended nor initially authorized by state leaders. Territorial expansion is typically understood as a centrally driven and often strategic activity. But as Anderson shows, nearly a quarter of great power coercive territorial acquisitions since the nineteenth century have in fact been instances of what he calls inadvertent expansion. A two-step process, inadvertent expansion first involves agents on the periphery of a state or empire acquiring territory without the authorization or knowledge of higher-ups. Leaders in the capital must then decide whether to accept or reject the already acquired territory. Through cases ranging from those of the United States in Florida and Texas to Japan in Manchuria and Germany in East Africa, Anderson shows that inadvertent expansion is rooted in a principal-agent problem. When leaders in the capital fail to exert or have limited control over their agents on the periphery, unauthorized efforts to take territory are more likely to occur. Yet it is only when the geopolitical risks associated with keeping the acquired territory are perceived to be low that leaders are more likely to accept such expansion. Accentuating the influence of small seemingly insignificant actors over the foreign policy behavior of powerful states, Inadvertent Expansion offers new insights into how the boundaries of states and empires came to be and captures timeless dynamics between state leaders and their peripheral agents.

Where China Meets India
Thant Myint-U, 2011-09-13 Thant Myint-U's Where China Meets India is a vivid, searching, timely book about the remote region that is suddenly a geopolitical center of the world. From their very beginnings, China and India have been walled off from each other by the towering summits of the Himalayas, by a vast and impenetrable jungle, by hostile tribes and remote inland kingdoms stretching a thousand miles from Calcutta across Burma to the upper Yangtze River. Soon this last great frontier will vanish: the forests cut down, dirt roads replaced by superhighways, insurgencies crushed, leaving China and India exposed to each other as never before This basic shift in geography as sudden and profound as the opening of the Suez Canal will lead to unprecedented connections among the three billion people of Southeast Asia and the Far East What will this change mean Thant Myint U is in a unique position to know Over the past few years he has traveled extensively across this vast territory where high speed trains and gleaming new shopping malls are now coming within striking distance of the last far flung rebellions and impoverished mountain communities And he has explored the new strategic centrality of Burma where Asia's two rising giant powers appear to be vying for supremacy At once a travelogue a work of history and an informed look into the future Where China Meets India takes us across the fast changing Asian frontier giving us a masterful account of the region's long and rich history and its sudden significance for the rest of the world

Liquid Territories Christoforos Romanos, 2024-11-29 In addition to being a fundamental concept for planning the water infrastructure which supports extensive agricultural economies across Southeast Asia knowledge of the Mekong River's hydrological catchments has calibrated the control of land resources and people Liquid Territories shows how and why the areal dimensions of the Mekong's basin delta and floodplain have become a critical geographic reference for human activities This book concentrates on the way knowledge of the river's catchments has been recorded on and extracted from maps Repeatedly drawn by geographers engineers and cartographers since before the start of European colonization the book describes how cartographic projections of the basin delta and floodplain have affected geopolitical strategy the exercise of military power and anthropogenic modifications of the terrain Drawing on the discourses of hydrology geography and cartography as well as military science colonial politics and regional planning the book explains why the spatial articulation of surface water flows is reflected in the configuration of national boundaries soils and settlements today Focusing on geographic concepts the book provides insights into the process of urbanization in Southeast Asia the region's colonial and post colonial history the Mekong River's political ecology the scales of contemporary water management and the design of territory This book will be relevant to academics who are interested specifically in the Mekong River and Lower Mekong Basin as well as in integrated water management planning It would be especially relevant to architects urbanists and landscape architects
