

This is an unusual book. Its title suggests that it is a collection of essays about Donald Davidson's views on truth, meaning, and the mental. But the focus is really much more on Davidson as refracted through the lens of Ernie Lepore and Kirk Ludwig's two volumes, Davidson: Meaning, Truth, Language, and Reality (OUP 2005) and Davidson: Truth-theoretic Semantics (OUP 2007). The Lepore/Ludwig interpretation is, by my count, the direct focus of seven of the twelve papers. Moreover, the editor does not contribute an introduction to the volume, leaving the task instead to Lepore and Ludwig. The overall result is the sense of participating in an ongoing debate whose parameters are never made clear and that is taking place in something of a vacuum. We are told in the brief Preface that Lepore and Ludwig have provided "a new systematization of his philosophy of language, meaning, and thought" (vii), and Lepore and Ludwig themselves provide an overview of Davidson's work, but at no point is it explained just what Lepore and Ludwig are proposing, how it differs from standard interpretations of Davidson, and, most importantly, why getting Davidson right should matter to us.

religion psychology and neuroscience Book jacket Cumulated Index to the Books ,1962 Re-Reading the Age of Innovation Louise Kane,2022-07-28 The period of 1830 1950 was an age of unprecedented innovation From new inventions and scientific discoveries to reconsiderations of religion gender and the human mind the innovations of this era are recorded in a wide range of literary texts Rather than separating these texts into Victorian or modernist camps this collection argues for a new framework that reveals how the concept of innovation generated forms of literary newness that drew novelists poets and other creative figures working across this period into dialogic networks of experiment The 14 chapters in this volume explore how inventions like the rotary print press or hot air balloon and emergent debates about science trade and colonialism evolved new forms and genres Through their examinations of a wide range of texts and writers from well known novelists like Conrad Dickens Hardy and Woolf to less canonical figures like Charlotte Mew El as Mar and Walter Frances White the chapters in this collection re read these texts as part of an age of innovation characterized not by division and divide but by collaboration and community The Spiritual Journal of Henry David Thoreau Malcolm Clemens Young,2009 Most people who care about nature cannot help but use religious language to describe their experience We can trace many of these conceptions of nature and holiness directly to influential nineteenth century writers especially Henry David Thoreau 1817 1862 In Walden he writes that God himself culminates in the present moment and that in nature we encounter the workman whose work we are But what were the sources of his religious convictions about the meaning of nature in human life Library of Congress Catalogs Library of Congress,1964 The Nature of Consciousness, the Structure of Reality Jerry Davidson Wheatley,2001 This book describes how understanding the structure of reality leads to the Theory of Everything Equation The equation unifies the forces of nature and enables the merging of relativity with quantum theory The book explains the big bang theory and everything else Ecclesiastes (Baker Commentary on the Old Testament Wisdom and Psalms) Craig G. enterprise that can rightfully be called radical His phenomenology leads back to the original dimension of life to a reality that precedes and conditions the natural sciences and even objectivity as such The Michel Henry Reader is an indispensable resource for those who are approaching Henry for the first time as well as for those who are already familiar with his work It provides broad coverage of the major themes in his philosophy and new translations of Henry s most important essays Sixteen chapters are divided into four parts that demonstrate the profound implications of Henry s philosophy of life for phenomenology for subjectivity for politics art and language and for ethics and religion The Humane Perspective John Cottingham,2024-07-03 The book brings together fourteen essays from the work of John Cottingham on moral philosophy and the philosophy of religion spanning the past fifteen years The papers are closely related in so far as they all deal with the perennial moral and spiritual challenges of human existence and the search for meaning and value in human life As well as being thematically linked they also share a common style and methodology illustrating the distinctive goal that has increasingly informed the author s work in recent years that of promoting a more humane conception of philosophizing While in no way discarding the technical tools of the professional philosopher such as abstract argumentation and analysis whose value and importance are unquestionable this approach is notable for drawing on the full range of resources available to the human mind including those that depend on literary artistic poetic imaginative aesthetic and emotional modes of awareness In contrast to the model of the philosopher as a kind of detached scrutineer the essays exemplify the belief that there is a distinctive and valuable kind of philosophical understanding that requires a more involved and engaged stance The philosophical questions dealt in the volume all fall broadly within the familiar domains of moral philosophy and the philosophy of religion but the reflections offered on these areas of human thought and practice always aim to be sensitive to how morality and religion actually operate in the lives of the human beings involved Narrative, Religion and Science Stephen Prickett,2002-03-28 Stephen Prickett explores the narrative in ways of thinking about the world over 300 years
