

HOPE FOR THEIR SURVIVAL RESTS IN OUR HANDS... SECRETS OF THE WILD PANDA

Closer with National Geographic to the remote Qin Ling mountains of central China, where, amidst the steep cliffs and bamboo forests, a remarkable research team has spent two long years with wild pandas. Their work is critical now, because these well-known creatures are in dire jeopardy. The offspring of captive pandas are rare and sickly compared to those naturally raised, and scientists race to discover why before their habitats and populations disappear.

Watch the scientists make their critical discovery: a tiny seven-week-old cub they name Xi Wang, and see for the first time the nurturing behavior of a female panda. For more than a year, in harsh conditions, she films tracks and observes the mother and her cub, documenting its scientifically crucial development to maturity. Xi Wang means Hope, for the study of her life may well save her entire species—revealing how to improve their survival rate in the wild and also care in captivity. Already she has revealed many SECRETS OF THE WILD PANDA.
