Rhetorical Delivery as Technological Discourse Ben McCorkle, 2012-01-19 According to Ben McCorkle the rhetorical canon of delivery traditionally seen as the aspect of oratory pertaining to vocal tone inflection and physical gesture has undergone a period of renewal within the last few decades to include the array of typefaces color palettes graphics and other design elements used to convey a message to a chosen audience McCorkle posits that this redefinition while a noteworthy moment of modern rhetorical theory is just the latest instance in a historical pattern of interaction between rhetoric and technology In Rhetorical Delivery as Technological Discourse A Cross Historical Study McCorkle explores the symbiotic relationship between delivery and technologies of writing and communication Aiming to enhance historical understanding by demonstrating how changes in writing technology have altered our conception of delivery McCorkle reveals the ways in which oratory and the tools of written expression have directly affected one another throughout the ages To make his argument the author examines case studies from significant historical moments in the Western rhetorical tradition Beginning with the ancient Greeks McCorkle illustrates how the increasingly literate Greeks developed rhetorical theories intended for oratory that incorporated writerly tendencies diminishing delivery's once prime status in the process Also explored is the near eradication of rhetorical delivery in the mid fifteenth century the period of transition from late manuscript to early print culture and the implications of the burgeoning print culture during the nineteenth century McCorkle then investigates the declining interest in delivery as technology designed to replace the human voice and gesture became prominent at the beginning of the 1900s Situating scholarship on delivery within a broader postmodern structure he moves on to a discussion of the characteristics of contemporary hypertextual and digital communication and its role in reviving the canon while also anticipating the future of communication technologies the likely shifts in attitude toward delivery and the implications of both on the future of teaching rhetoric Rhetorical Delivery as Technological Discourse traces a long view perspective of rhetorical history to present readers a productive reading of the volatile treatment of delivery alongside the parallel history of writing and communication technologies This rereading will expand knowledge of the canon by not only offering the most thorough treatment of the history of rhetorical delivery available but also inviting conversation about the reciprocal impacts of rhetorical theory and written communication on each other throughout this history

Ward, David Trobisch, 2013-04-27 The New Testament books were written to be read aloud The original audiences of these texts would have been unfamiliar with our current practice of reading silently and processing with our eyes rather than our ears so we can learn much about the New Testament through performing it ourselves Richard Ward and David Trobisch are here to help Bringing the Word to Life walks the reader through what we know about the culture of performance in the first and second centuries what it took to perform an early New Testament manuscript the benefits of performance for teaching and practical suggestions for exploring New Testament texts through performance today Encyclopedia of Rhetoric and Composition Theresa Enos, 2013-10-08 First Published in 1996 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company The Aura of the Word in the Early Age of Print (1450?600) Samuel Mareel, 2017-07-05 Did the invention of movable type change the way that the word was perceived in the early modern period In his groundbreaking essay The Work of Art in the Age of Mechanical Reproduction the cultural critic Walter Benjamin argued that reproduction drains the image of its aura by which he means the authority that a work of art obtains from its singularity and its embeddedness in a particular context The central question in The Aura of the Word in the Early Age of Print 1450 1600 is whether the dissemination of text through print had a similar effect on the status of the word in the early modern period In this volume contributors from a variety of fields look at manifestations of the early modern word in English French Latin Dutch German and Yiddish as entities whose significance derived not simply from their semantic meaning but also from their relationship to their material support to the physical context in which they are located and to the act of writing itself Rather than viewing printed text as functional and lacking in materiality contributors focus on how the placement of a text could affect its meaning and significance The essays also consider the continued vitality of pre printing press kinds of text such as the illuminated manuscript and how new practices such as the veneration of handwriting sprung up in the wake of the invention of movable type
