

Introduction

Malala Yousafzai is a fifteen year old girls education advocate in the Swat District of Pakistan. She was committed to upholding the rights of girls in spite of the Taliban occupying the swat and denying girls their access to an education.

From a young age, Malala was a beacon of progress to her community from writing a blog about her experience as a female student in Taliban-controlled Swat, to appearing on Pakistan Television program, advocating the girls education. Her age was no barrier to her advocacy.

However, Malala molded views on the ethical responsibility not simply due to her actions but because of the strength to which she had held these convictions.

Despite the staggering adversity she faced, Malala never wavered in her resolve and committed these.
