Road From Coorain:

The Road from Coorain Jill Ker Conway, 2011-06-22 In a memoir that pierces and delights us Jill Ker Conway tells the story of her astonishing journey into adulthood a journey that would ultimately span immense distances and encompass worlds ideas and ways of life that seem a century apart She was seven before she ever saw another girl child At eight still too small to mount her horse unaided she was galloping miles alone across Coorain her parents thirty thousand windswept drought haunted acres in the Australian outback doing a man's job of helping herd the sheep because World War II had taken away the able bodied men She loved and makes us see and feel the vast unpeopled landscape beautiful and hostile whose uncertain weathers tormented the sheep ranchers with conflicting promises of riches and inescapable disaster She adored and makes us know her large visioned father and her strong radiant mother who had gone willingly with him into a pioneering life of loneliness and bone breaking toil who seemed miraculously to succeed in creating a warmly sheltering home in the harsh outback and who upon her husband's sudden death when Jill was ten began to slide bereft of the partnership of work and love that had so utterly fulfilled her into depression and dependency We see Jill staggered by the loss of her father catapulted to what seemed another planet the suburban Sydney of the 1950s and its crowded noisy cliquish school life Then the heady excitement of the University but with it a yet more demanding course of lessons Jill embracing new ideas new possibilities while at the same time trying to be mother to her mother and resenting it escaping into drink pulling herself back striking a balance We see her slowly gaining strength coming into her own emotionally and intellectually and beginning the joyous love affair that gave wings to her newfound self Worlds away from Coorain in America Jill Conway became a historian and the first woman president of Smith College Her story of Coorain and the road from Coorain startles by its passion and evocative power by its understanding of the ways in which a total deep rooted commitment to place or to a dream can at once liberate and imprison It is a story of childhood as both Eden and anguish and of growing up as a journey toward the difficult life of the free Road from Coorain Jill Ker Conway, 2002 The Road from Coorain Jill Ker Conway, 1991 The first woman president of Smith College recalls her Australian outback childhood and her climb into North American academia The Road from Coorain , A Woman's Education Jill Ker Conway, 2011-06-01 The acclaimed author of the best selling The Road from Coorain and True North now gives us the third book in her remarkable continuing memoir describing the pleasures the challenges and the constant surprises good and bad of her years as the first woman president of Smith College The story opens in 1973 as Conway unbeknownst to her is first looked over as a prospective candidate by members of the Smith community and continues as she assesses her passions and possibilities and agrees to the new challenge of heading the college in 1975 The jolt of energy she gets from being surrounded by several thousand young women enables her to take on the difficulties that arise in dealing with the diverse Smith constituencies from the self appointed protectors of the great male tradition of humanistic learning to the equally determined young feminists insisting on change We see Conway juggling the needs and concerns of faculty students parents trustees and alumnae and re defining and redesigning aspects of the college to create programs in line with the new realities of women s lives We sense the urgency of her efforts to shape an institution that will attract students of the 1990s and beyond Through it all we see Jill Ker Conway coping with her husband s illness and learning to protect and sustain her inner self As the end of a decade at Smith approaches we see her realizing that she has both had her education and made her contributions and that it is time now for her to graduate

Intimate afterlives of empire Astrid Rasch,2025-09-02 Through close readings of almost twenty autobiographies written after the break up of the British Empire the book examines how individuals engage with the changing narrative landscape brought about by decolonisation It considers the autobiographies less for what they may teach us about the moment remembered and more as windows on the act of remembering This adds a crucial dimension to our understanding of the legacies of colonialism and how the ongoing process of decolonisation is reflected on the level of the individual It argues that autobiographers are at once influenced by and seek to influence the cultural memory of empire and its legacies and the authors own position in both Situated at the intersection of imperial decolonisation history memory studies and life writing studies the book uncovers this intimate afterlife of empire
