Species Christopher Kemp, 2017-10-23 As part of the rising concern for global biodiversity Christopher Kemp makes clear the value of preserved specimens in basic research Edward O Wilson Pulitzer Prize winning biologist and author The tiny lungless Thorius salamander from southern Mexico thinner than a match and smaller than a quarter The lushly white coated Saki an arboreal monkey from the Brazilian rainforests The olinguito a native of the Andes which looks part mongoose part teddy bear These fantastic species are all new to science at least newly named and identified but they weren't discovered in the wild instead they were unearthed in the drawers and cavernous basements of natural history museums As Christopher Kemp reveals in The Lost Species hiding in the cabinets and storage units of natural history museums is a treasure trove of discovery waiting to happen With Kemp as our guide we go spelunking into museum basements dig through specimen trays and inspect the drawers and jars of collections scientific detectives on the hunt for new species We discover king crabs from 1906 unidentified tarantulas mislabeled Himalayan landsnails an unknown rove beetle originally collected by Darwin and an overlooked squeaker frog among other curiosities In each case these specimens sat quietly for decades sometimes longer than a century within the collections of museums before sharp eyed scientists understood they were new The Lost Species vividly tells these stories of discovery from the latest information on each creature to the people who collected them and the scientists who finally realized what they had unearthed and will inspire many a museumgoer to want to peek behind the closed doors and rummage through the archives An unexpectedly delightful and rewarding jaunt The Wall Street Journal
