Mammal In The Mirror Understanding Our Place In The Natural World:

Natural Selections (Large Print 16pt) David P. Barash, Professor of Psychology and Founder and Director of the Peace and Strategic Studies Program David P Barash, PH.D., 2011-01-22 If we are in part a product of our genes can free will exist Incisive and engaging this indispensable tour of evolutionary biology runs the gamut of contemporary debates from science and religion to our place in the universe Restoring the Human Context to Literary and Performance Studies Howard Mancing, Jennifer Marston William, 2022-01-28 Restoring the Human Context to Literary and Performance Studies argues that much of contemporary literary theory is still predicated at least implicitly on outdated linguistic and psychological models such as post structuralism psychoanalysis and behaviorism which significantly contradict current dominant scientific views By contrast this monograph promotes an alternative paradigm for literary studies namely Contextualism and in so doing highlights the similarities and differences among the sometimes conflicting contemporary cognitive approaches to literature and performance arguing not in favor of one over the other but for Contextualism as their common ground

Revolutionary Biology David P. Barash, There is a revolution underway in biology It is based on a new perception of bodies and genes in which the former are the end product of the latter within the continuum of evolution Twenty five years after Richard Dawkins helped revolutionize our thinking about selfish genes it is time to re evaluate Revolutionary Biology explains in simple vivid terms what this exciting approach has to offer and then applies its stunning insights to human beings This novel perspective galvanizes our understanding of how evolution works what living things are all about and not least what it means to be human The controversial disciplines of sociobiology and evolutionary psychology have generated startling insights into longstanding questions concerning the nature and purpose of families altruism vs selfishness and free will vs biological determinism Written by one of its foremost figures Revolutionary Biology is a manifesto and educated layman s guide to this ongoing revolution Barash s purpose is to demystify the basic concepts of the genetic revolution and take the reader on a tour accessible and authoritative of the principles that underlie this fascinating turn in scientific thought Much has been written about evolution animals and the animal and evolutionary origins of human behavior yet only recently have biologists begun to appreciate these connections The key concept is that genes not species not groups and not even individuals are the apple of evolution s eye The result has been a major biological paradigm shift that is making itself felt in the social sciences as well Barash explores the phenomenon of altruism both at the animal level and the human level Barash draws not only on a wealth of biological evidence but on literature philosophy and the familiar details of everyday life to communicate the essentials of this increasingly influential approach to the study of the human species Clearly and engagingly written Revolutionary Biology will be fascinating reading for those seeking an entry into this new science

Against the Grain, 2000 The Mammal in the Mirror David P. Barash, Ilona A. Barash, 2001 Biology is everywhere DNA genetic engineering deadly viruses and fertility treatments are just some of the many topics we constantly read and hear about But how much do most of us really know about the natural world and our place in it Never before have we heard so much about something we know so little about the complexity of life itself The Mammal in the Mirror is an ideal way to learn about this world and how it makes us who we are It begins with the small stuff what biologists call skin in a close up view of DNA genes viruses and cells then it moves back a bit to explore the larger systems of human biology sex and reproduction the brain and behavior and energy Finally The Mammal in the Mirror takes a look at Homo sapiens from the revealing distance of ecology evolution and evolutionary psychology The result is an accurate accessible view of ourselves that will enable every reader regardless of background to become bioliterate and able to understand the discoveries that make the headlines of today and tomorrow After all there s no getting around the fact that ultimately we are animals c

Science and Religious Anthropology Wesley J. Wildman, 2016-04-01 Science and Religious Anthropology explores the convergence of the biological sciences human sciences and humanities around a spiritually evocative naturalistic vision of human life The disciplinary contributions are at different levels of complexity from evolution of brains to existential longings and from embodied sociality to ecosystem habitat The resulting interpretation of the human condition supports some aspects of traditional theological thinking in the world s religious traditions while seriously challenging other aspects Wesley Wildman draws out these implications for philosophical and religious anthropology and argues that the modern secular interpretation of humanity is most compatible with a religious form of naturalistic humanism This book resists the reduction of meaning and value questions while taking scientific theories about human life with full seriousness It argues for a religious interpretation of human beings as bodily creatures emerging within a natural environment that permits engagement with the valuational potentials of reality This engagement promotes socially borne spiritual quests to realize and harmonize values in everything human beings do from the forging of cultures to the crafting of personal convictions

At Home in the World Eilon Schwartz, 2010-07-02 Challenging conventional understanding of humans as selfish and competitive at their core At Home in the World asserts that we have evolved as a profoundly social species biologically related to the rest of the natural world and at home on the only planet for which we are adapted to live Eilon Schwartz traces the history of Darwinism examining attempts of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries to apply Darwin s theories to educational
