Nuclear Warfare:

Nuclear Nightmares Nigel Calder, 1981 Imagining Nuclear War in the British Army, 1945-1989 Simon J. Moody, 2019-12-05 The primary mission assigned to the British Army from the 1950s until the end of the Cold War was deterring Soviet aggression in Europe by demonstrating the will and capability to fight with nuclear weapons in defence of NATO territory This surreal mission was unlike any other in history and raised a number of conceptual and practical difficulties This comprehensive study observes how the British Army imagined nuclear war and how it planned to fight it Using new archival sources Simon J Moody analyses British thinking about tactical nuclear weapons the role of the Army within NATO strategy the development of theories of tactical nuclear warfare how nuclear war was taught at the Staff College the role of operational research and the evolution of the Army's nuclear war fighting doctrine He argues that the British Army possessed the intellectual capacity for organisational adaptation but that it displayed a cognitive dissonance about some of the more uncomfortable realities of nuclear war A Strategy For Terminating A Nuclear War Clark C Abt, 2021-11-28 Avoiding a nuclear war or ending one if avoidance fails is an important but relatively unexplored aspect of nuclear doctrine Dr Abt examines the feasibility of antagonists agreeing to exclude their open cities from nuclear targeting and to replace strategic bombardment with retaliatory invasion to create less of a hair trigger deterrent Critical net assessments by U S strategists and the effects of such a strategy on the Soviet Union and on U S allies are considered along with problems implementation might pose The author contends that both deterrence and the potential for limiting damage are strengthened by pre war plans for a nuclear ceasefire and stalemate short of holocaust Strategic Nuclear War William Martel, Paul L. Savage, 1986-03-26 En undersøgelse af hvordan USA og USSR faktisk kunne føre atomkrig De opstillede scenarier er taget fra computer på grundlag af uklassificeret materiale vedrørende supermagternes kerneveben styrker og potentielle bymilitær og industrimål The Use of Nuclear Weapons and the Protection of the Environment during International Armed Conflict Erik V Koppe, 2008-04-25 In 1996 the International Court of Justice delivered an Advisory Opinion on the legality of the use of nuclear weapons in which the Court stated that while the existing international law relating to the protection and safeguarding of the environment does not specifically prohibit the use of nuclear weapons it indicates important environmental factors that are properly to be taken into account in the context of the implementation of the principles and rules of the law applicable in armed conflict The present work analyses this conclusion focusing on the question whether or not the use of nuclear weapons during international armed conflict would violate existing norms of public international law relating to the protection and safeguarding of the environment Although the use of weaponry during armed conflict is usually related to the protection of individuals the rapidly emerging appreciation of and the worldwide realization of the intrinsic value of the natural environment as an indispensable asset for the continuation of life including human life on this planet both for present and future generations warrants a thorough and extensive examination of the question of the illegality of the employment of nuclear weapons from the point of view of international environmental protection law The book consists of two parts Part I discusses the historical development and the effects of nuclear weapons Part II discusses the protection of the environment during international armed conflict under ius in bello and ius ad bellum and ius pacis Only then is it possible to assess the legality of the use of nuclear weapons under this particular set of rules

The Climatic, Biological, and Strategic Effects of Nuclear War United States. Congress. House. Committee on Science and Technology. Subcommittee on Natural Resources, Agriculture Research, and Environment, 1985 Nuclear First Strike George H. Quester, 2006 This provocative and timely work examines various scenarios in which the deployment of nuclear weapons could occur the probable consequences of such an escalation the likely world reactions and the plausible policy ramifications Rather than projecting the physical damage that would result from nuclear attacks George H Quester offers an exploration of the political psychological and social aftermath of nuclear conflict The prospect of nuclear attack sixty years after atomic bombs destroyed Hiroshima and Nagasaki is difficult to confront on many levels We may avoid the discussion for emotional reasons for fear of generating a self confirming hypothesis or simply because of the general nuclear taboo But there are also self denying propositions to be harnessed here if the world gives some advance thought to how nuclear weapons might be used again such attacks may be headed off If the world avoids nuclear weapons use until the year 2045 it will be able to celebrate one hundred years of nuclear concord Quester suggests that this may be achieved through the careful consideration of possible nuclear deployment scenarios and their consequences In this insightful analysis he provides a starting point for informed and focused reflection and preparation Martha Smith Norris Tactical Nuclear Weapons Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, 2020-11-19 In the 1970s tactical nuclear warfare was a topical issue The introduction of the new generation of tactical nuclear weapons into Europe could have had disastrous consequences These new weapons had already been developed by nuclear weapon laboratories and pressures were growing for their deployment On first sight smaller and more accurate nuclear weapons may seem more humane and militarily preferable to the relatively high yield tactical nuclear weapons currently deployed But some of these new types of weapons would blur the distinction between nuclear and conventional weapons and their use would make escalation to strategic nuclear war extremely likely Indeed the argument for these new weapons is that their use in wartime is more credible and therefore acceptable than current types of tactical nuclear weapons This perception could easily lead to the exceedingly dangerous idea that some types of tactical nuclear war were winnable The fact has to be faced that any use of nuclear weapons is almost certain to escalate until all available weapons are used To believe otherwise is to believe that one side will surrender before it has used all the weapons in its arsenal History shows that this is most unlikely to happen Because of its importance SIPRI organized a meeting to discuss the whole question Originally published in 1978 this book is the outcome of that meeting

Subject Cataloging Division, 1988 The Dynamics of the Arms Race David Carlton, Carlo Schaerf, 2020-12-01 The nuclear arms race had dominated international politics for the two decades prior to publication Originally published in 1975 this symposium examines the dynamics of change within the arms race and the attempts at controlling and limiting it At the time the nuclear arms race was strongly technologically determined as Herbert York demonstrates in discussing the impact of MIRV Such progress as has been made in nuclear disarmament has been far outdistanced by the technological developments so that as Jack Ruina argues SALT is only important when seen as part of a process of negotiating arms limitations The most significant result of this technological advance has been the emergence of a qualitatively new system of international politics which Hans Morgenthau analyses This system is essentially bipolar in nuclear terms and the history of the disarmament negotiations as reviewed by William Epstein is an exercise in freezing this structure The negotiations themselves particularly SALT and the prospects for further progress are discussed extensively by Thomas Schelling Kosta Tsipis George Rathjens and others The book also surveys developments in chemical and biological warfare and includes an important paper on chemical warfare agents by the Soviet chemist O A Ruetov The final section looks at recent developments in the theory of conflict and its applications in the Middle East South Africa and a number of developing countries Energy Abstracts for Policy Analysis ,1979
