AUTHOR'S PURPOSE

Over centuries, the growth of agriculture contributed to the rise of civilizations. Before agriculture became widespread, people spent most of their lives searching for food—hunting wild animals and gathering wild plants. About 11,500 years ago, people gradually learned how to grow cereal and root crops, and settled down to a life based on farming.

By 3,000 years ago, much of the world's population had become dependent on agriculture. Scholars are not sure why this shift to farming took place, but it may have occurred because of climate change.

When people began growing crops, they also began herding and breeding wild animals. Adopting wild plants and animals for people to use is called domestication. The first domesticated plant was probably rice or corn. Cereal farmers were cultivating rice as early as 7500 BCE.

The author most likely wrote this selection to...

- A) highlight the importance of agriculture
- B) emphasize why people grow crops
- C) illustrate how farmers plant crops
- D) explain the history of agriculture
