The Hidden Meaning of Mass Communications

Fereydown Hoveyda,2000-07-30 In 1917 the French poet Guillaume Apollinaire predicted the death of books in one or two centuries and their replacement by film and sound In the early sixties Marshall McLuhan proclaimed the end of the Gutenberg Galaxy Neither of these predictions has yet happened Nonetheless the development of computer science and the spread of the Internet have already changed the landscape of the media and affected the fields of book publishing journalism cinema and television In his new book Hoveyda who was involved with cinema and literature for many years scrutinizes the relationship between the different forms of media and art Drawing on his varied experience as well as on his knowledge of the arts and media he explains how cinema literally existed before literature or articulate language and that all other forms of communication stem from this innate capability to think cinematically Looking at the extraordinary technological developments in the fields of cinema television and communications Hoveyda finds a hidden purpose behind them a kind of common thread that illustrates and explains the quest of humans for communication As far back as one can go Hoveyda finds that humans were always preoccupied with the question of how to communicate what was going on in their minds They tried and found ways of transmitting to one another the impressions and ideas churning in their heads Prehistoric cave drawings hieroglyphs literature and canvas paintings were and are part of such attempts This progression of inventions seems to pursue a linear path toward externalization of their people s thoughts and dreams The pinnacle of this externalization will be reached when it becomes automatic and foregoes the use of heavy equipment Bunuel once told the author and his friends that he dreamt of the day when he would sit in a darkened room and project on a wall the film he was concocting in his head This is exactly the goal of the technological progress we witness Hoveyda s survey also includes a description of the evolution of modern cinema as he witnessed it some new and revolutionary remarks about film appreciation and filmmaking discussion of television and how it differs from cinema and observations on the impact of media on one another as well as the influence of the more recent technologies on narration styles A provocative account that will be of interest to scholars researchers students and anyone involved with the development of communications

Television Histories Gary R. Edgerton, Peter C. Rollins, 2021-09-15 From Ken Burns's documentaries to historical dramas such as Roots from A E's

Biography series to CNN television has become the primary source for historical information for tens of millions of Americans today. Why has television become such a respected authority? What falsehoods enter our collective memory as truths? How is one to know what is real and what is imagined or ignored by producers, directors, or writers? Gary Edgerton and Peter Rollins have collected a group of essays that answer these and many other questions. The contributors examine the full spectrum of historical genres but also institutions such as the History Channel and production histories of such series as The Jack Benny Show, which ran for fifteen years. The authors explore the tensions between popular history and professional history and the tendency of some academics to declare the past off limits to nonscholars. Several of them point to the tendency for television histories to embed current concerns and priorities within the past as in such popular shows as Quantum Leap and Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman. The result is an insightful portrayal of the power television possesses to influence our culture.
