Louisiana In Perspective 2005:

Environmental Health Perspectives ,2004-07 Student Displacement in Louisiana After the Hurricanes of 2005 John F. Pane,2006 Hurricane Katrina was the most costly and devastating natural disaster in U S history It and Hurricane Rita combined left the Gulf region with tremendous challenges for recovery and the need to rebuild infrastructure and reestablish services This report focuses on the displacement of approximately 200 000 public school students in Louisiana To help guide educators and policymakers in their ongoing responses to this disaster and in their preparations for future events this technical report documents many of the short term effects of the movements of students caused by the storms Focusing on the Louisiana public school system it explores the experiences of displaced students during the first academic year following the hurricanes their movements among schools the durations of enrollments at each site time out of school and the number and characteristics of students fitting each of four patterns of movement It also reports on the effects of the displacement on schools and their students and policies adopted in response to serving displaced students Using Louisiana s student data system we obtained information about all students in the state who entered or exited a public school at any time during the 2005 06 school year because of the hurricanes and we surveyed principals from a stratified sample of schools serving displaced students statewide The student displacement due to Hurricanes Katrina and Rita persisted throughout the entire 2005 06 school year 55 percent of the displaced students ended the school year outside their original schools The students who remained displaced were disproportionately minority students and students who had been achieving poorly prior to the storms But even among those students who have returned to their original schools a substantial amount of schooling was lost and the effects of the storms linger Principals reported that displaced students both those who have returned to their original schools and those who have enrolled elsewhere in the state exhibited several common symptoms of trauma In some schools the displaced students were more likely than others to engage in fighting arguing bullying eating or playing in isolation and violating school rules they were less likely to engage in school clubs activities social events or sports teams Principals also frequently reported that displaced students were more likely than preexisting students to need mental health counseling Schools throughout the state and the nation will continue to be called on to serve displaced students and it is imperative that they obtain the resources they need to serve them well Policies and resources to help teachers manage their own hurricane related problems and mental health needs might ultimately improve the services teachers provide to students Finally education officials at both the state and local levels would benefit from better access to complete and accurate student records and a national system to coordinate two way sharing of student information across state boundaries New Perspectives on State Government Fiscal Challenges John Merrifield,Barry W. Poulson,2023-07-03 In this book on new fiscal approaches nineteen experts examine topics ranging from constitutional reform and debt fatigue to fiscal rules and zero based budgeting Together these contributions inform a multifaceted nuanced argument for the need to formalize spending restraint and redefine state debt to include unfunded liabilities Scholars will find the book useful as a reference tool explaining how rules based fiscal policy is used to address debt fatigue and unsustainable spending growth Legislators and practitioners will find the book useful as a reference source in designing and simulating second generation fiscal rules and educators will find the book helpful for its close analysis of policies in representative states such as Illinois New York New Jersey Nebraska and California

Handbook of public health in natural disasters Ronald Ross Watson, Joseph A. Tabor, John E. Ehiri, Victor R. Preedy, 2023-08-07 The combination of growing populations moving into large cities in high risk zones increase the risk of natural disasters with a substantial public health consequence A high population density and rapid air travel increase the spread and effects of plagues and diseases People in countries with limited resources are more vulnerable to death and other consequences of disasters This requires global rather than national preparedness and response strategies Public health organisations government and non government organisations can take a leadership role and provide training organisation and research knowledge to improve responses to such disasters This book is the first holistic public health approach in relation to natural disasters It fills the gap to have a one stop shopping synopsis of key ideas associated with mediation of public health natural disasters It is unique in focusing on lessons learned rather than what to do Published research relating to general responses by public health agencies to disasters is scientifically evaluated Various types of disasters are reviewed flooding diseases earthquakes

Kettl, Howard Kunreuther, 2011-06-07 Named one of Planetizen's Top 10 Books of 2006 Hurricane Katrina not only devastated a large area of the nation's Gulf coast it also raised fundamental questions about ways the nation can and should deal with the inevitable problems of economic risk and social responsibility This volume gathers leading experts to examine lessons that Hurricane Katrina teaches us about better assessing perceiving and managing risks from future disasters In the years ahead we will inevitably face more problems like those caused by Katrina from fire earthquake or even a flu pandemic America remains in the cross hairs of terrorists while policy makers continue to grapple with important environmental and health risks Each of these scenarios might in itself be relatively unlikely to occur But it is statistically certain that we will confront such catastrophes or perhaps one we have never imagined and the nation and its citizenry must be prepared to act That is the fundamental lesson of Katrina The 20 contributors to this volume address questions of public and private roles in assessing managing and dealing with risk in American society and suggest strategies for moving ahead in rebuilding the Gulf coast Contributors Matthew Adler Vicki Bier Baruch Fischhoff Kenneth R Foster Robert Giegengack Peter Gosselin Scott E Harrington Carolyn Kousky Robert Meyer Harvey G Ryland Brian L Strom Kathleen Tierney Michael J Trebilcock Detlof von Winterfeldt Jonathan Walters Richard J Zeckhauser Government Budget Forecasting Jinping Sun, Thomas D.
