The purpose of a headline on an intranet is to grab attention, set the context, and provide a clear summary of the content.

Good headlines that carry a lot of information are:

- In the present tense
- Active
- Informative, stating the who, what, when, where, and how

Avoid jargon and jargon so not everyone can understand it. English is not an exception.

Quality

Images should be cropped and resized to fit the page and adhere to any photo discussion guidelines. When saving an image, it should be optimized to reduce the file size so that it will be displayed quickly on the page.

An intranet may feel more consistently well laid out if most images are of the same width, perhaps taking up half the column width of the page.

File size and display / download times

Best practice is to test the intranet and if teams to measure the loading times of pages and have guidance on page and image sizes.

Best practice might be to limit image file size for mobile or overall in total, meaning that if two images are published on one page, they each can only be half the limit. Some organizations allow multiple or frame access
