Nuclear Juggernaut:

Nuclear Juggernaut Martin Bond, 2013-11-05 Every day throughout Britain by road by rail and by sea there are large numbers of routine movements of radioactive cargo Materials at all stages of the nuclear cycle from uranium ore to nuclear waste from nuclear warheads to radioactive isotopes used in medicine are constantly on the move In normal circumstances handling low level material exposes workers to small doses of radiation but a serious accident could lead to widespread contamination and to the major risk of additional deaths from cancer The accident record is not good There are repeated small accidents and many people believe that the major accident is simply waiting to happen This book gives a thorough account of what is moved by whom and for what purpose It considers the risks including that of terrorism the safety record and the precautions It also highlights the perils of the secrecy surrounding the industry for example local councils are responsible for coping with any accident but are not told when or where nuclear movements are taking place Martin Bond's careful work is a large step towards order in a chaotic industry Originally published in 1992

Nuclear Power Martin J Pasqualetti, 2019-03-13 Addressing the major issues surrounding the use of nuclear power twenty nine social scientists with extensive involvement in the assessment and management of nuclear technology discuss critical areas of concern problem recognition risk estimation and policy formation and implementation The authors appraise fundamental policy issues and examine The 19th Element John L. Secret Agents Marjorie Garber, Rebecca Walkowitz, 2013-10-18 When the American Bar Association recreated the trial of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg on the fortieth anniversary of their execution the jury acquitted the mock Rosenbergs finding that in today's courts they would not have been convicted of espionage The 1950s trial of the Rosenbergs on charges of Atomic Spying and stealing the secrets of the Atomic bomb was a major event of Cold War America galvanizing public opinion on all sides of the question Secret Agents presents essays by lawyers cultural critics social historians and historians of science as well as a reconsideration of the

Rosenbergs by their younger son Robert Meeropol Secret Agents gives new resonance to a history we have for too long been willing to forget British Nuclear Mobilisation Since 1945 Jonathan Hogg, Kate Brown, 2021-05-18 This book explores aspects of the social and cultural history of nuclear Britain in the Cold War era 1945 1991 and contributes to a more multivalent exploration of the consequences of nuclear choices which are too often left unacknowledged by historians of post war Britain In the years after 1945 the British government mobilised money scientific knowledge people and military industrial capacity to create both an independent nuclear deterrent and the generation of electricity through nuclear reactors This expensive and vast technopolitical project mostly top secret and run by small sub committees within government was central to broader Cold War strategy and policy Recent attempts to map the resulting social and cultural history of these military industrial policy decisions suggest that nuclear mobilisation had far reaching consequences for British life The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of Contemporary British History

Conservation Fallout John Wills, 2012-08-15 An unprecedented look at nuclear politics in California Vehement widespread opposition accompanied the rise of the U S nuclear industry during the 1960s and 1970s In Conservation Fallout John Wills examines one of the most controversial atomic projects of the period Pacific Gas and Electric Company s decision to build its premier nuclear power plant at Diablo Canyon a relatively unsettled biologically rich and especially scenic part of the central California coastline Two competing visions of California emerged while the plant underwent construction Environmentalists used Diablo as a symbol of impending ecological doomsday while PG E envisioned it as the model that would usher in a new age of energy production The Sierra Club almost disbanded over whether to condone or protest the reactor project Divisions also emerged in the local community as residents and politicians enticed by the promise of cheap electricity and lucrative tax revenues found themselves pitted against others who feared the dangers of radiation in their own backyards The controversy intensified when a fault line was discovered within three miles of the plant Grassroots groups The Mothers for Peace a local women s group and The Abalone Alliance a statewide nonviolent direct action organization did their utmost to stop the plant from going on line In 1979 an Alliance rally in San Francisco attracted 25 000 people while 40 000 others gathered in San Luis Obispo During a two week long blockade of the Diablo plant in 1981 over 1 900 activists were jailed the largest arrest in the history of American antinuclear protest Despite its significance in the history of twentieth century environmental issues and the continuing debate over the safety of nuclear power the full story of Diablo Canyon has not been told until now Wills bases his account on extensive interviews with the individuals involved as well as on the archives of the Sierra Club several protest organizations public agencies PG E and others The result is an engaging balanced examination of nuclear politics in California By focusing on one of the last wild places in the state and its transformation into a major technological center and on the evolution and strategies of the little studied grassroots protest groups determined to protect California and resist the spread of nuclear technology Wills has made a major contribution to our understanding of

The Atomic West Bruce William Hevly, John M. Findlay, 1998 The Manhattan Project the World War II race to produce an atomic bomb transformed the entire country in myriad ways but it did not affect each region equally. Acting on an enduring perception of the American West as an empty place the U.S. government located a disproportionate number of nuclear facilities particularly the ones most likely to spread pollution in western states. The Manhattan Project manufactured plutonium at Hanford Washington designed and assembled bombs at Los Alamos New Mexico and detonated the world's first atomic bomb at Alamogordo New Mexico on June 16 1945. In the years that followed the war the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission selected additional western sites for its work. Many westerners initially welcomed the atom. Like federal officials they too regarded their region as empty or underdeveloped. Facilities to make test and base atomic weapons sites to store nuclear waste and even nuclear power plants were regarded as assets. By the 1960s and 1970s however regional attitudes began to change. At a variety of locales ranging from Eskimo Alaska to Mormon Utah westerners devoted themselves to resisting the atom and its effects on their environments and communities. Just as the atomic age had dawned in the American West so its artificial sun began to set there. The Atomic West brings together contributions from several disciplines to explore the impact on the West of the development of atomic power from wartime secrecy and initial postwar enthusiasm to public doubts and protest in the 1970s and 1980s. An impressive example of the benefits of interdisciplinary studies on complex topics The Atomic West advances our understanding of both regional history and the history of science and does so with human communities as a significant focal point. The book will be of special interest to students and experts on the American West environmental history and the history of science and technology.

Hope's Horizon Chip Ward, 2013-04-10 At a time of widespread environmental pessimism Hope's Horizon goes on an inspirational offensive. In this entertaining and thought provoking book author Chip Ward tells of his travels among a new generation of activists who are moving beyond defensive environmental struggles and advocating pioneering proactive strategies for healing the land. Chip Ward's three year odyssey took him behind the scenes of efforts to reconnect fragmented habitats and re-wild the North American continent the campaign to drain Lake Powell and restore Glen Canyon to its natural state and the struggle to keep nuclear waste off Western Shoshone ancestral lands and ultimately to abolish all nuclear power and weapons. These movements and the practical visionaries leading them challenge readers with a new paradigm in which land is used in a spirit of collaboration with natural systems rather than domination of them. Broad in its sweep Hope's

Horizon uses its topical subjects as springboards for exploring how we can redefine our place in the world while restoring damaged habitats replenishing lost diversity and abandoning harmful technologies Lively literate and free of the grimness that characterizes so much environmental writing Hope s Horizon will change the way readers see the world It makes complicated concepts and issues accessible and wild ideas compelling And while the book s starting point is a hard nosed indictment of humanity s failed stewardship of the earth the stories that follow tell of catalytic optimism and ecological wisdom in the face of self destructive habit and blind pride A Mighty Shield Robert Hagan,2020-08-11 Marxism and Educational Theory Mike Cole,2007-10-18 Mike Cole considers the origins and developments within the evolution of Marxist theory and postmodern theory He analyses how Marxism and postmodernism are articulated within the sociology of education since its inception up to the present Biomass Assessment Andrew Millington,John Townsend,2013-11-05 Energy is an issue for everyone and nowhere more so than in the SADCC countries But for sensible policy and planning clear information about the extent of resources is needed This innovative study combines the results of field assessment of biomass with advanced techniques in remote sensing by satellite to give the first comprehensive and detailed picture of biomass distribution throughout the SADCC region The authors describe their techniques classify the kinds of biomass and give its distribution by that classification in all nine SADCC countries Woody biomass resources and supplies are clearly analysed This book is essential reading for project officers planners and all others involved in the collection and analysis of data on biomass resources throughout the world Originally published in 1988 Critical Race Theory and Education M. about these fuels in mind the material is presented clearly and discussions of environmental protection measures are given in table form throughout the ease of reference A directory of environmental guidelines regulations and standards is given in an appendix While a high calorific value fuels remain the most significant source of energy in many countries economic and other constraints on the use of these fuels may result in more nations turning to low grade sources of energy to operate their industrial or transportation sectors The greater potential for environmental degradation that accompanies the use of low grade fuels means that it is crucial that environmentally sound methods for their management such as those presented here be more widely available The Environmental Management of Low Grade Fuels will be valuable for industry specialists policy makers students and all who are concerned with the life cycle of these materials Mary MacDonald is an affiliated scientist and Michael Chadwick is a former director at the Stockholm Environment Institute Garegin Aslanian is a senior associate with the Institute for High Temperature Research in Moscow Originally published in 1996
