S. Hayes III,2024-10-11 Flaw Enforcement my journey from cop to artist In the spring of 2019 my life was moving along just fine status quo My kids were growing my bills were paid and my marriage was skipping along My life and career to this point was filled with ups and downs comfort and pain but all very normal at least to me One early morning in June changed everything turning my life upside down and shaking it like a child playing with a snow globe I began to question my career my faith desires and my views and opinions of the world and its inhabitants All of this just in time for a global pandemic What started as a journaling exercise tasked to me from my therapist to deal with my post traumatic stress turned into a living breathing examination of my thoughts and feelings While I wish I would have dated each individual excerpt the timeline of my evolution becomes pretty clear However cliché this writing is a true yin yang compilation of that journey After reading it back several times this is a story that some will enjoy in the beginning and may despise toward the end Others might throw it into a lit fireplace after the first chapter But if anyone makes it all the way to the end I hope my words can inspire them to see things differently or at the very least be entertained by my unique level of bullshit Our world is an amazing place Humans can create beautiful and meaningful things Our consciousness of these facts should be appreciated not ignored Happiness is obtainable And no that isn't sarcasm

Fleeing Mississippi Ricky Douglas, 2018-09-25 It is 1949 Harry the Hammer Higgins's first mistake was winning a fight he'd been paid to lose His second mistake was that the man he'd beaten was the reigning heavyweight champion of the world Framed for the champ's death he is forced out of boxing Now he earns his living fighting in barns and alleys of small backwater towns Although the standard pay was about fifty dollars the biggest share of his profits came from the side bets common at such events Whether he was supposed to win or lose made no difference to Higgins He wagered accordingly After accepting money to throw such a match he was forced to change the outcome when winning turned out not to be enough for his opponent The man accepted a baseball bat from someone in the crowd with the intention of using it on Higgins as he lay prone on the mat pretending to be too whipped to continue As before winning a fight he'd agreed to lose infuriated those in the know who'd wagered heavily against him And like before these men wanted revenge for their losses For Harry it was time to get out of Mississippi While traveling by freight train back to his home and family in Saint Louis he encounters a kid nearly as desperate to get out of Mississippi as he was Despite the fact that a black man traveling with a white kid could get him hanged the two become travel mates The journey soon proves to be more adventurous than either traveler is prepared for And soon each finds they are dependent on the other for their very survival
