

Endangered Animals

There are millions of different types of animal on the planet. Some animals are struggling to survive in the wild and are at risk of disappearing from the world forever. These animals are endangered.

How do animals become endangered?

Animals can become endangered when their habitat is destroyed or changed.

They can also be endangered by pollution or disease.

Humans can endanger animals by hunting or overfishing.

Endangered animals can become extinct.

Which animals are at risk?

One of the world's most endangered animals is the Javan rhino. There may be less than 40 still living in the wild.

Amur leopards are the most endangered big cats. They can only be found in parts of Russia and China.

Hawksbill turtles, African forest elephants, mountain gorillas and Javanell orangutans are also critically endangered.

How can we protect them?

Lots of charities work to protect endangered animals and their habitats. People can help by donating money or volunteering.

Animals can be protected by making outdoor spaces friendly to wildlife with plants and places to shelter.

Putting your rubbish in the bin and recycling as much as possible can also make a big difference.

Extinct: Has died out and no longer exists.

Overfishing: Catching too many fish from the same area.
