Financial Deregulation and Integration in East Asia Takatoshi Ito, Anne O. Krueger, 2007-12-01 The increased mobility and volume of international capital flows is a striking trend in international finance While countries worldwide have engaged in financial deregulation nowhere is this pattern more pronounced than in East Asia where it has affected in unanticipated ways the behavior of exchange rates interest rates and capital flows In these thirteen essays American and Asian scholars analyze the effects of financial deregulation and integration on East Asian markets Topics covered include the roles of the United States and Japan in trading with Asian countries macroeconomic policy implications of export led growth in Korea and Taiwan the effects of foreign direct investment in China and the impact of financial liberalization in Japan Korea and Singapore Demonstrating the complexity of financial deregulation and the challenges it poses for policy makers this volume provides an excellent picture of the overall status of East Asian financial markets for scholars in international finance and Asian economic development

Real Exchange Rate Uncertainty and Private Investment in Developing Countries Luis Servén, 2002 Servén examines empirically the link between real exchange rate uncertainty and private investment in developing countries using a large cross country time series data set He builds a GARCH based measure of real exchange rate volatility and finds that it has a strong negative impact on investment after controlling for other standard investment determinants and taking into account their potential endogeneity The impact of uncertainty is not uniform however There is some evidence of threshold effects so that uncertainty only matters when it exceeds some critical level In addition the negative impact of real exchange rate uncertainty on investment is significantly larger in economies that are highly open and in those with less developed financial systems

This edited volume will be the definitive work in the field Taxation in Modern China Donald J. S. Brean, 2013-10-23 Taxation in Modern China is concerned with tax and public financial issues arising in China's economic transition. The contributors among the leading authorities on public finance, transitional economics and policy reform in China direct attention to the largest and most comprehensive fiscal reform program in modern history. The essays collected here cover the main institutional, intergovernmental and industrial issues and address the long-term challenges facing China as well as transitional changes East Asian Capitalism A. E. Safarian, Wendy Dobson, University of Toronto. Centre for International Business, 1996-01-01. Essays demonstrate how to reduce the entry cost of North American businesses trying to penetrate East Asian markets Economic Growth, second edition Robert J. Barro, Xavier I. Sala-i-Martin, 2003-10-10. The long-awaited second edition of an important textbook on economic growth, a major revision incorporating the most recent work on the subject. This graduate-level text on economic growth surveys neoclassical and more recent growth theories, stressing their empirical implications and the relation of theory to data and evidence. The authors have undertaken a major revision for the long-awaited second edition of this widely used text, the first modern textbook devoted to growth theory. The book has been expanded in many areas and incorporates the latest research. After an introductory discussion of economic growth, the book examines neoclassical growth theories from Solow-Swan in the 1950s and Cass-Koopmans in the 1960s to more recent refinements; this is followed by a discussion of extensions to the model with expanded treatment in this edition of heterogeneity of households. The book then turns to endogenous growth theory, discussing among other topics models of endogenous technological progress with an expanded discussion in this edition of the role of outside competition in the growth process, technological diffusion and an endogenous determination of labor supply and population. The authors then explain the essentials of growth accounting and apply this framework to endogenous growth models. The final chapters cover empirical analysis of regions and empirical evidence on economic growth for a broad panel of countries from 1960 to 2000. The updated treatment of cross-country growth regressions for this edition uses the new Summers-Heston data set on world income distribution compiled through 2000 Sources of Chinese Economic Growth, 1978-1996 Chris Bramall, 2000-09-14. This analysis of the political economy of growth in the era of Deng Xiaoping takes issue with the growth accounting methodologies and market-centred explanations which characterize so much of the literature on transition-era China. By adopting an approach which echoes the pioneering work of Chalmers Johnson, Alice Amsden and Robert Wade on other East Asian economies and which makes full use of the rich statistical materials that have become available since 1978, this book shows that Chinese growth was driven by a combination of state-led industrial policy and the favourable infrastructural legacies of the Maoist era. And in giving due weight to the sheer complexity of the growth process by looking in detail at the experience of four very different Chinese regions, it avoids over-simplistic macroeconomic generalization. Nevertheless, even this type of approach is inadequate because it fails to explain why industrial policy has been so much more successful in China than in other countries This book therefore goes beyond the development state approach to argue that state autonomy in China reflected the remarkably equal distribution of income and wealth at the end of the 1970s and paradoxically the destruction of party structures and institutions during the Cultural Revolution The policy implications are stark The Chinese experience demonstrates that industrial policy and state spending on physical and social infrastructure can produce rich rewards conversely slavish reliance on foreign direct investment and trade are likely to limit the pace of growth But attempts to replicate China's success in Latin America sub Saharan Africa and South Asia will fail because their governments will not resist rent seeking by classes and interest groups Moreover as the state becomes weaker in the wake of the re emergence of a powerful capitalist class even Chinese growth may prove unsustainable
