Our Product

Virtual Aesthetic Simulator (VAS)

PASCAL Lab has developed, in collaboration with the Geneva watchmaking school, a fault simulator on a mechanical part. This allows teachers to train students in more depth in the profession of quality controller. This tool combined with an LMS (Learning Management System) or the integrated management interface makes it possible to animate aesthetic control training in a fun and efficient way.

Aesthetic Control
HOW TO CONTROL IT?

- Adopting a simple and unambiguous language for a common understanding of aesthetic quality at the extended enterprise level.
- By using a semantic reference matrix associating the types of anomalies (scratches, marks, deformations, stains, etc.) with the intensity levels defined with the company.
- Determining the compliance thresholds of the component or product.

- Providing uniform training in operational competence for those responsible for aesthetic control.
- By designing realistic and attractive teaching sequences for total quality control.
- By regularly assessing the competence to measure the aesthetics, expressed in a tangible, reliable and sustainable way(R&R), of a component or product.

Lighten the management of physical components

Companies must manage and maintain sets of physical components used as a "yardstick" for the training of aesthetic testers.

The cost of managing a set of physical parts representing all combinations of shapes, defect types, materials and finishes is very high.

VAS allows the company to significantly reduce its management burden by scanning components or products in 3D and then virtually adding 'typical' aesthetic anomalies.

VAS Allows

- Remove the management of components used as standards for aesthetic control training.
- To make employees aware of aesthetic control and the vocabulary to be used.
- Integrate aesthetic control into a total quality management (TQM) approach with precise indicators at all stages of the manufacturing and after-sales processes.
- Provide the after-sales service with an efficient tool to record the aesthetic aspect of the supported product.

Raising awareness of criteria and aesthetic vocabulary

Aesthetic defects are often the result of careless handling of the components and products concerned, whether during manufacture, assembly or marketing.

By making the VAS platform available to staff in direct contact with the product, it becomes very easy to make them aware of the evaluation criteria and the aesthetic vocabulary defined by the company.

Improve after-sales service Returns

The VAS platform can equally be used by the service network staff to assist them in the collective assessment of aesthetic defects by referring to the semantic matrix as well as to the cases already referenced.

It is also possible, in an intuitive and playful way, to indicate, in accordance with the product nomenclature, a type of imperfection, its intensity and its location. It is also possible to draw up a precise repair estimate or to declare a non-conformity on a product coming from a market return.

Improving the total quality approach

During the entire product life cycle, from design through customer service to distribution, the VAS application makes it possible to build up a database of aesthetic defects in a simple, efficient and computerised way.

On this basis of consolidated data, it is then possible to establish recurrences, such as potential correlations, thus enabling solutions to be found to correct, improve and optimise the product, process or service offered.

A semantic matrix of aesthetic defects

VAS is based on a semantic matrix that defines 5 levels of intensity for each of the 5 types of aesthetic defects referenced: Scratches - Marks - Deformations - Stains - Uniformity.
