

PURPOSE

The Learning for Influence methodology¹ is for organisations working in development who want to better understand and document how they influence policy and practice.

What does impact or policy and practice mean in your work?
What stories can your organisation tell about how you achieve change?

The methodology will help answer these questions. It will help you gain a deeper understanding of the policy change processes that you are engaging in, and it will help you understand how to influence others better in the future.

This includes organisations that are active to create change within systems, such as education, health, agriculture, enterprises and organisations working for sustainable development at all levels. The methodology aims to help these organisations better understand the change processes that they contribute to, as well as how they exchange as individuals.

The methodology will help you document your knowledge of the change processes you are trying to influence by helping you articulate the values that inform how you work, and the context that you work in, and creating narratives that show how your organisation has impact. This methodology also emphasises the importance of the perspectives of people working within organisations to achieve change, and on the stories that they can tell together about their experience. This emphasis puts people at the forefront of how impact happens over time.

The methodology was developed through a consultative process with 60 development NGOs and experts in DPE, each with a range of experience across the specific processes, approaches, and instruments being the pilot.

This methodology was consultative and developed with a consultative learning by gathering and valuing experiences that were learned from other learning, knowledge and learning (OEL) activities, learning for influence via participatory action research (PAR) approaches such as outcome mapping, outcome harvesting, Most Significant Changes and second stories.

The methodology focuses on four dimensions that drive how influencing policy and practice happens: context, organisational approaches, examples from practice, and stories of impact. The methodology aims to generate multiple perspectives within an organisation and can also be used for collaborative learning across a network of organisations working together. Therefore, the methodology should involve a variety of individuals within organisations working to influence policy and practice.
