Charles Edquist, Leif Hommen, Lena Tsipouri, 2012-12-06 Public Technology Procurement and Innovation studies public technology procurement as an instrument of innovation policy In the past few years public technology procurement has been a relatively neglected topic in the theoretical and research literature on the economics of innovation Similarly preoccupation with supply side measures has led policy makers to avoid making very extensive use of this important demand side instrument These trends have been especially pronounced in the European Union There as this book will argue existing legislation governing public procurement presents obstacles to the use of public technology procurement as a means of stimulating and supporting technological innovation Recently however there has been a gradual re awakening of practical interest in such measures among policy makers in the EU and elsewhere For these and other related measures this volume aims to contribute to a serious reconsideration of public technology procurement from the complementary standpoints of innovation theory and innovation policy OECD Regional Development Studies Regions in Industrial Transition Policies for People and Places OECD, 2019-11-14 This report offers guidance on how to manage industrial transition and is directed

Innovation and Institutions Steven Casper, Frans van Waarden, 2005-01-01 The idea behind this book is that institutions are important when it comes to explaining the specialisation and performance of national innovation systems The idea is not new But largely the institution concept has remained somewhat vague and unspecified in the literature This book is valuable since it succeeds in opening up the black box of institutions and organisations The distinction between institutions at different levels and how they link up and form a systemic whole is especially original and fruitful The interdisciplinary team behind the book has also produced a welcome antidote to the current tendency to benchmark innovation systems exclusively on the basis of quantitative indicators The analysis demonstrates that some national systems do better in some specific areas because of being supported by institutions that are sometimes deeply rooted in history and culture This is why imitating best practice across countries is not a straight forward thing to do Bengt ke Lundvall Aalborg University Denmark Innovation and Institutions is an extensive elaboration on the make up of systems of innovation It examines why some countries are more innovative than others why national styles of innovation differ and goes on to explore why some countries make radical innovations but fail to successfully market them whilst others making incremental innovations have more commercial success The book draws on a variety of different literatures and perspectives to illustrate the organizational and institutional dimensions of national innovation systems Literatures discussed include the economics of innovation organizational sociology administrative science institutional economics organizational learning network analysis business systems economic governance and regulation This truly interdisciplinary book will be invaluable to academics and researchers focussing on innovation in a wide range of fields It will also strongly appeal to practitioners and policymakers concerned with innovation

The Social Direction of the Public Sciences Stuart Blume, Joske Bunders, Loet Leydesdorff, Richard P.

Whitley, 2012-12-06 This volume of the Sociology of the Sciences Yearbooks stems from our experience that collaborations between non scientists and scientists often initiated by scientists seeking greater social relevance for science can be of major importance for cognitive development It seemed to us that it would be useful to explore the conditions under which such collaborations affect scientific change and the nature of the processes involved This book therefore focuses on a number of instances in which scientists and non scientists were jointly involved in the generation of scientific results at the interface of science and society Despite the considerable variety of cases reported here a number of questions are central Under what conditions do such cooperative processes occur What perceptions of social relevance and what sorts of collaborations with non scientific groups are involved How is this collaboration achieved and through what forums How can insights into its conditions and mechanisms stabilize such cooperations over a longer period of time If they are stabilized do they really affect science or do they mainly function to shield the rest of the science system against external influences These questions are pertinent both to intellectual problems in the sociology of science and to the practical concerns of modern science policies The significance of relations between knowledge producers and knowledge consumers and interest in how these relations affect science and society have changed considerably in recent decades Elgar Encyclopedia of Corporate Communication
